Post-War Program

U. S. Naval Forces in Alaska

BY VICE ADM. A. E. MONTGOMERY, USN
Commandant Alaskan Sea Frontier, 17th Naval District

THE activities of the Seventeenth Naval District, along with those of the other Armed Forces throughout the military organization, have felt sharp reductions as post-war allowances, budgets, and needs of the service force adjustments and deductions in operating units.

Vice Adm. Montgomery

The District, founded in April of 1944, reached its operating peak in 1945 as activities were quickly established to secure firmly the American hold in the Aleutians and to control effectually the waters of the North Pacific, particularly the much-traveled sea lanes of the Great Circle Route.

The Navy, during the years of war, maintained four operating bases, Kodiak, Dutch Harbor, Adak and Sitka, together with supporting units and air facilities totalling some twenty-four establishments of varying size. These were located principally in the Aleutian Chain, but some were on the Alaskan Mainland as far south as Sitka.

Practically all bases were built from the ground up after the start of the war except Kodiak, Sitka and Dutch Harbor where construction began in 1939 and 1940. For many years the Alaskan area had been neglected; but after the Hepburn Board completed a study of defensive and strategic positions in Alaska in December, 1938, it recommended the construction of submarine, destroyer and air bases. In its report, the Hepburn Board emphasized that air bases in the Alaskan area would be essential in time of war and that the Aleutians themselves would be of great tactical importance.

Carrying out the recommendations of the Board, construction of naval air facilities began in September, 1939, at Sitka and Kodiak. In July, 1940, facilities were enlarged to include the development of a naval air station and several Army facilities at Dutch Harbor. After the Japanese bombed Dutch Harbor and occupied Kiska and Attu in June, 1942, the contractor's forces were reinforced with Seabees and by April 1, 1943, all construction in the Alaskan area had been taken over by naval construction battalions.

Today Kodiak, the site of the District headquarters, and Adak comprise the main active establishments of the Navy in Alaska. The other activities have either been placed in a maintenance status or have been decommissioned, as the District adjusts itself to form a nucleus for rapid

Supporters of Service Pay Bill Strive to Bring Revised Draft to New Vote After 227 to 163 Loss

In spite of a serious defeat in the House of Representatives on Tuesday, supporters of Service pay legislation still hope to secure passage of a satisfactory measure at the present session of Congress. By a vote of 227 to 163 the House recommitted the Kilday Pay Bill to the House Armed Services Committee.

In normal Congressional practice the recommittal of a bill usually kills it. However, in this instance members of the committee, supporters of the bill, and even some of those who opposed its passage hope to work out a compromise that will assure its enactment.

At his press conference on Thursday President Truman expressed his disappointment at the House action in sending the Pay Bill back to the committee. He said it had been carefully worked out and he would have been pleased if it had been passed.

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson sent a message to all members of the Armed Forces, assuring them that the National Military Establishment will continue its efforts to secure favorable action by Congress on the pay legislation. He said:

"The National Military Establishment has full faith in the merits of the pay reforms as recommended in the Hook Report and approved by the President, and will continue in its efforts to seek favorable action by Congress, based upon the logic of our position."

President's Message

While the bill was under consideration by the House the President wrote Speaker Sam Rayburn, urging passage of the measure. His letter follows:

"My Dear Mr. Speaker: For some time I have been concerned over the personnel situation in the armed forces. We are having great difficulty in attracting and retaining the caliber of personnel, both officer and enlisted, on a career basis which is essential to our fighting forces.

"The Career Compensation Act of 1949 now pending before the House of Representatives will, in my opinion, provide the necessary incentive to follow a career in the armed services.

"I feel that this legislation is a most important part of our defense program, and that it will do much to strengthen our national security in this critical period. Consequently, it is my hope that the House will see fit to take favorable action on this legislation.

"Sincerely yours,
"Harry S. Truman."

During the floor consideration the bill was attacked by advocates of economy and by other Representatives who felt that in the pay raises enlisted men were being discriminated against in favor of officers. They felt that general officers were getting too many and enlisted men too few of the benefits of the bill.

They also denounced the proposal to eliminate family allowances. Supporters of the bill pointed out that enlisted personnel would benefit greatly by the passage of the measure, since the raises would be permanent, whereas the present

Debate On Service Pay

FOLLOWING are pro and con extracts from the debate on the Service Career Compensation bill from the House of Representatives' sessions of 20 and 24 May.

Mr. Reed (R-N.Y.)—"Words are fine, but what the people want is action on the part of Congress in reducing expenditures. This is the soundest form of tax reduction. And it is painless."

Mr. Allen (R-Ill.)—"I am authoritatively advised that much of the money which we in Congress annually appropriate to our armed services is now being spent to highly train military personnel in all grades, but, Mr. Speaker, we are not training them to continue in their service to our country; we are training them, instead, for future gainful employment in the mills, factories, transportation, and other service occupations and private corporate interests.

"As it stands today, the National Military Establishment, created primarily to secure the peace and welfare of this Nation, is in a large measure acting as a training and a trade school for the commercial, manufacturing, transportation, mining, and other private corporate interests in these United States.

"Mr. Chairman, it is because of the foregoing that I sincerely hope that this Congress will pass a career compensation bill, a bill of such nature as will retain to our armed services men who will guard the Treasury disbursements in peacetime as they will the Nation in case of war."

Mr. Short (R-Mo.)—"Sir, it has been charged under this bill that we are favoring officers against the enlisted man. Nothing could be more false.

"Already, I have pointed out that a high-school graduate could go into the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or Air Force, and make more money than he could in private industry. He has no grave responsibilities or great care. Under existing law a brigadier general draws no more pay than a lieutenant colonel after 30 years of service, and only $60 more a month than a major after 30 years of service. What a gross injustice. One of the reasons for this bill is to eradicate such obvious wrongs, and to obliterate such inequities."

Mr. Johnson (R-Calif.)—"What are we trying to do here? We are trying to erect the structure which will take care of the security of America. In that way this bill is different from any bill that we have before us. The security system of America cannot fail—that is the one branch of our Government that must succeed. If it does fail, America as we know it will no longer be America. Germany, Italy and Japan learned what failure in a nation's security system means. That is why it is essential that we have a good personnel system and a good pay structure which will attract and hold the kind of men that we need to handle these problems in our Government."

* * *

Mr. Bennett (D-Fla.)—"I have heard a great deal of talk today on the subject of the incentive involved in trying to get second lieutenants to join the Army. I am a little in doubt as to what this bill accomplishes for them. I think it is rather futile to say that you are going to raise the pay of a brigadier-general and expect that to be an incentive for young men to join the Army as a second lieutenant."

USAF Promotes 1598 To Temporary Captain

Promotion of 1598 officers to the temporary rank of captain effective 23 May, was announced this week by the Air Force. Advanced were 425 Regular male officers, 1164 Reserve male officers and nine WAFS.

Currently in session at the Pentagon, reviewing the records of approximately 2330 officers, is a board to select officers for permanent promotion to captain. The approved recommended list of selected "fully qualified" officers will be announced by 1 July.

Air Force officers receiving temporary promotions to the rank of captain were chosen by selection boards convened in the major commands and at USAF Headquarters. The records of approximately 8920 eligible officers were reviewed. Promoted were those considered "best qualified."

Eligibility criteria included:

(a) All permanent grade first lieutenants having four and a half years of service for promotion purposes before 1 July, 1948.

(b) All USAFR and WAF officers on active duty as first lieutenants with four and a half years of active Federal commissioned service prior to 1 July, 1948, or who were 29½ years of age prior to 1 July, 1948.

The present breakdown, by temporary grade, of officers in the Air Force, including the promotions just announced, follows:

General Officers	203
Colonels	1,795
Lieutenant Colonels	3,363
Majors	6,626
Captains	17,320
First Lieutenants	18,170
Second Lieutenants	2,803

The present breakdown of permanent grade USAF officers is:

General Officers	94
Colonels	564
Lieutenant Colonels	1,472
Majors	3,212
Captains	6,206
First Lieutenants	5,680
Second Lieutenants	731

Under present legislation the USAF is authorized 20,400 officers in the National Military Establishment.

A tentative schedule of promotion boards, each of which will review records for permanent promotions, follows:

U. S. Daily Press Views

Washington Post—"It would be foolish to say that money is the only thing that attracts men to military careers, or that military pay can be equated with the remuneration in private industry. But certainly the country has a vital concern, at least, in providing adequate financial means to maintain the prestige of the honorable profession of arms."

Nashville Tennessean—"The proposed mock battle between the Air Force's B-36 bomber and Navy jet interceptor planes should be called off immediately. . . . The whole matter should be kept secret. Undoubtedly, in due time during Air Force war games and fleet battle maneuvers, the matter can be investigated properly. But it certainly has no place in the current Navy-Air Force squabble over which arms of the Services is to have which weapon."

New Orleans States—"If the Marine Corps lives that long it will be 174 years old on Nov. 10. Its life is threatened by interservice jealousies and the inability of the Secretary of Defense to make the military establishment work hand in hand as the Congress has decreed and common sense dictates."

Baltimore Sun—"Times and customs change, but somehow the United States Coast Guard seems always to live up to enviable reputation as the housekeeping department of the Government. It gets the odd jobs that are nobody's particular business, from transporting missionaries in Alaska to running a bird sanctuary in Hawaii. It is not surprising, therefore, to find that the Coast Guard has been assigned the task of maintaining our share of the network of weather ships that now lie along the trans-Atlantic air route."

Service Pay Bill

family allowances are only temporary, and will end with the termination of the measure.

After a lengthy debate, occupying nearly three days' time opponents of the measure submitted a number of amendments for the purpose of reducing the pay scales. All of these were beaten down, one by Representative Francis Case (R-S.D.) by the narrow margin of 103 to 85. The Case amendment would have reduced the proposed pay of those above the grade of captain in the Army, and corresponding ranks in other Services, by five per cent, and that of all lower grades by three per cent. This would have accomplished a gross saving of approximately $114 million. If this amendment had been adopted, the consensus of opinion appears to be that the bill as amended would have passed the House.

Family Allowance Amendment

An amendment by Representative John A. Carroll (D-Colo.) to continue family allowances for those who enlisted prior to the enactment of the pending bill until the termination of their enlistment contracts was adopted by a vote of 90 to 69.

While much was said on the floor about the adverse effects of the discontinuance of the family allowances it was subsequently pointed out that under the terms of the bill 90,000 soldiers in the Army would receive greater compensation under the new pay scales without dependency allowances than they now receive, including such benefits, and that 60,000 others would receive the same as they now receive, since they are protected by a savings clause from any loss in pay. Some 400,000 other enlisted men, not now drawing family allowances, would be greatly aided by the bill.

After the debate was concluded a vote was taken on a motion by Mr. Case to recommit the bill. An analysis of the roll call, published in this issue, shows that 121 Democrats, 105 Republicans, and the lone American Laborite, Representative Vito Marcantonio of New York, voted to send the bill back to committee, whereas 120 Democrats and 43 Republicans voted against recommittal and in favor of placing the measure on final passage.

Revive Pay Measure

The action of the House came as a distinct shock to supporters of the bill who felt that passage of the measure was assured, because of the unanimous vote of the committee in its favor. At first, there was some difference of opinion as to what further action was possible. Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex.), author of the bill, was bitterly disappointed and expressed the opinion that the proposal for adequate career compensation for the Uniformed Services was dead for several years to come.

However, after conferring with House leaders, members of his committee and representatives of the National Defense Establishment, Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), of the Armed Services Committee, declared that a revised measure would be presented to the House in the near future and would be passed. He said:

"The committee is restudying and rewriting the bill and we look for early action on an adequate measure that will be satisfactory to the Services."

It seems clear that many of the opponents of the measure were surprised at the outcome of the vote on recommittal, and some of these are now anxious that the bill be amended to their satisfaction, in order that it may come up for final passage. Among these is Representative Pat Sutton (D-Tenn.), a freshman member who served as an enlisted man and an ensign of the Navy during World War II. Mr. Sutton was a leader of the opposition to the pay bill, primarily because he thought it gave too much to ranking officers and too little to enlisted men. However, he has expressed the hope that the bill will be revised by the committee and reported back to the House. He will appear before the committee next week to give his views. He said:

Favors Pay Increases

"I favor a bill that will provide equitable pay increases for captains down through enlisted ranks, and not as much for the top officers. I will fight any bill that takes family allowances from those who enlisted before 1 July 1946. My idea is that the proposed pay scale should remain as it is, but that all officers should revert to their permanent rank and be paid accordingly."

While some revision of pay scales is probable it is not likely that the revolutionary suggestion of Mr. Sutton will be adopted by the committee. Any saving that will be effected to meet the objections of the economy bloc will probably be accomplished by horizontal pay slashes of from three to five per cent, probably along the general lines of the rejected Case amendment, in order to effect a saving in excess of $100 million.

The committee's staff is now working with representatives of the National Military Establishment to determine the effect of a number of different proposals. It seems probable that a revised measure will be presented to the House by the committee in about two weeks.

Repeatedly, during House debate on the pay measure, members praised Chairman Vinson, Representative Kilday and other members of the Armed Services Committee for their comprehensive study of complex pay problems. Also lauded was the testimony of Service representatives and their assistance to the Committee throughout the long hearings.

A pay bill is also pending in the Senate but Chairman Millard Tydings (D-Md.), of the Senate Armed Services Committee, indicated that no action would be taken by his committee until after the House had completed consideration of its bill.

President Urges Aid

President Truman this week urged 600 representatives attending the National Conference on Community Responsibility to Our Peacetime Service Men and Women to help put an end to the apathetic attitude towards the needs of members of the Armed Forces.

The President said it is "much more important" now than when the Nation was at war to see to the personal welfare of men of the Armed Forces because today "we're fighting for peace in the world and the welfare of all people—not just ourselves."

The President criticized the tendency to pay less attention to the problems of Servicemen once the war was over. "The serviceman is just as important now," he declared. "Now we're trying to win the peace and we must have a backlog of young men to serve the peace. We're trying to keep these young men and their brothers and cousins from having to go under fire."

To Receive Honorary Degrees

Lieutenant Generals Leonard T. Gerow, Second Army Commander at Fort George G. Meade, Md., and Walter Bedell Smith, First Army Commander of New York City, N. Y., will receive the degree of Doctor of Military Science at Pennsylvania Military College, Chester, Pa., 7 June. Col. Frank K. Hyatt, President of PMC, will present the degrees to Generals Gerow and Smith.

Debate on Pay Bill

Mr. Shafer (R-Mich.)—"Mr. Chairman, as one who is frequently disturbed by our ever-increasing costs of Government, and as one who has opposed most of the programs that are responsible for such tremendous increases in Government expenditures, I rise to support this legislation.

"This legislation has as its primary purpose the establishment of a compensation program which will induce men and women to enter the armed services on a career basis and would remunerate them on this basis comparable to persons who seek to follow careers in industry and in professions."

Mr. Cole (R-N.Y.)—"The problem the Nation faces is not procurement of numbers. There are plenty of men who want those positions even at depressed rates of pay. It is quality that is affected. Let me show you what is happening. During the period from January 1946 to January 1949, a 3-year period, 4,256 Regular officers resigned, an annual average of nearly 1,500 resignations. Prior to the war the percentage of college trained men in the officer corps of the Army and Air Force was 87 percent; today it is 56 percent. In flying cadets this is the story. In the latter part of 1940 the 5,214 aviation cadets entering training included 36 percent college graduates and but 7 percent with less than 2 years' college, while in 1948 of the 2,629 aviation cadets entering training only 1.5 percent were college graduates and 71 percent had less than 2 years' college. The Army is trying to interest distinguished college graduates in Regular commissions. In 6 southern colleges a recent report shows that out of 54 proffered appointments, 34 were declined. The ultimate cost to the Nation if remedial action is not taken will be totally inadequate management of the multi-billion dollar investment represented in the military services and what is far more important, inadequate leadership when another emergency confronts us."

Mr. Rivers (D-S.C.)—"Now whose problem is this? Let me say this to you: In the event of another war we may not have the good fortune of having a Patton dashing across the landscape of France with the speed of a meteor. We may not have that man. If you want that man in the future, you had better prepare for him today. How should you prepare for that? You tell the young officer what he can hope for when he raises his hand and takes an oath to forever serve in the armed forces, for the tenure of office prescribed by the armed forces. When you tell him to make a career of the armed services and forego all opportunity of making a great deal of money in life, prepare now, when he leads your children and your children's children in the great armadas of the future, the great armies and the great navies of the future, prepare him now for the best leadership. You had better do it, because in the future, when the strategy of the future is unrolled before you, it is going to be the Regular Army officer and the Regular Navy officer and the Regular Air Force officer who is going to plan that strategy. You had better get the best that money can buy. He is going to lead your children, whether they are Reserves, whether they are draftees, or whether they are National Guard men. You have got a chance today to make that appointment with destiny."

Mr. Short. "I am happy that the able gentleman from South Carolina has issued this solemn warning, because if we do not get these young officers today we will not have the admirals and generals in another emergency."

Mr. Rivers. "If we do not pass this legislation today, in the very near future we are going to have an exodus from the armed services that will astound your imagination. We are laying this before you today with the greatest sincerity we have."

Mr. Durham (D-S.C.)—"Along with that, in this bill you are considering today is the problem of morale, as well as the dollar. You know and I know that it is impossible to conduct any kind of business without at least normally good morale. At the present time a captain who would be operating a B-29 or a B-36, draws $6,138, with all of his flight pay and everything else included. Under this new bill he will draw $7,380. He can walk out of that ship any hour he wants to and draw either ten or twelve thousand dollars with any commercial air line in this country. If he has a family, you and I could not blame him for walking out and taking a position with that company. It is a matter of economics. We must face it. We will face it in the future. These boys who are trained in radar are trained in all phases of its development. It is something that grows in size and increases like a snowball. We are going to have to train personnel in all branches, and they are going to have to be paid. I do not, therefore, put this matter simply on a dollars-and-cents basis; it is necessary, in my opinion, if you expect to have a small striking force, I say it is small compared with the one today that we know is probably the threat of the world, and we might just as well take cognizance today of the fact that they have an army of 4,500,000 men while we are trying to get along with a small force in this country. I believe the American people are willing to pay for it; that is the reason I am supporting this measure."

* * *

Mr. Hare (D-S.C.)—"A great deal has been said today about the private and about the brass, but so far as I am concerned most of it has been nothing more than cheap demagoguery by those who have not taken the time to actually analyze the provisions of this measure. At this point I want to pay my respects and compliments to the chairman and members of the Armed Services Committee for their untiring efforts in endeavoring to prepare and report an honest and fair bill."

Mr. Williams (D-Miss.)—"Although I am strongly and unalterably opposed to certain provisions of this bill, nevertheless, there is one provision with which I am in thorough accord. I feel that the Commission's recommendations in regard to hazard pay are sound and practical. It is to be expected, however, that these provisions of the bill are the ones most likely to be misunderstood and possibly attacked.

"It has been suggested that these pays, however applicable in peacetime, should not continue in time of war. The facts do not support any such contention. I do not wish to disparage other fighting units or to belittle their heroic performance of dangerous, unpleasant, and essential tasks. However, I feel obliged to correct a current misconception to the effect that the infantry sustained the heaviest combat losses in the recent war. Many accept this as a matter of fact, but our wartime casualty lists reveal otherwise. According to the War Department, out of a mean strength of 122,823 combat officers, the Army Air Forces had 23,551 killed in action. The fatality rate per year per 1,000 officers was 47.9. The corresponding rate for the infantry was 28.3, representing 8,233 deaths out of a total strength of 72,857 officers in combat.

"Among enlisted men the ratio was not less, as some might suggest, but greater. The Air Force lost 69 men per year per 1,000 in combat. The infantry lost but 27.7. The statistics thus show that the Air Force fatality rate was double that of the most dangerous ground branch. It was nine times that of the Army as a whole. These figures do not include 16,313 deaths during the war from accidents alone, resulting in an accident-fatality rate six times that of the rest of the Army from all noncombat causes. I seriously doubt, in view of these facts, that anyone can seriously maintain that in wartime all are exposed to the same risks, or that flying personnel are unfairly compensated to a greater degree than some even who are exposed to greater risks."

Mr. Sutton (D-Tenn.)—"I have heard most of the debate on this bill, and everybody has been presented the chance of saying they are not getting enough money. I have great respect for rank, in the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps. Like my good friend, I, too, was an enlisted man and also an officer in World War II. But let us look at this a little and let us see what a general or an admiral does get.

"You say he gets $8,800 base pay. That may be true, but that does not take into consideration the car he is furnished, nor the chauffeur he is furnished, nor the beautiful mansion or home he is furnished; that does not take into consideration the servants his wife is furnished, the cook he has for his home; that does not take into consideration his aide, who is his personal secretary; that does not take into consideration the private plane that is at his disposal. When you take these things into consideration, actually, a

How the House Members Voted on Service Pay

FOLLOWING is the way members of the House of Representatives voted on the roll call which resulted in sending the Service Pay Bill back to the House Armed Services Committee and thus preventing its immediate passage and materially delaying final consideration.

It must be noted that the vote was on a motion to recommit, offered by Representative Case (R-SD). Thus those who voted "Aye" were the ones who prevented House approval of the measure, while those who voted "Nay" were in favor of bringing the bill to a vote on its merits.

Debate on Pay Bill

general of the Army or an admiral of the Navy makes more than the Secretary of Defense; furthermore, he also has medical facilities not only for himself, but for his entire family."

* * *

Mr. H. Carl Andersen (R-Minn.)—"Furthermore, it does not take into consideration the fact that the army officer does not pay a thin dime toward his retirement, as a Congressman does."

Mr. Sutton. "Definitely; the gentleman pays towards his retirement."

Mr. Williams (D-Miss.)—"Also it does not take into consideration the fact that he can buy his groceries at the commissary."

Mr. Sutton. "He has the full advantages of the PX and the commissary; the gentleman is right."

Mr. Williams. "He buys his clothes at the PX and his groceries at the commissary."

Mr. Sutton. "And buys diamond rings for his wife without tax, buys her fur coats without tax, at the wholesale price; yes, and can buy television sets that way, too. There is a per diem paid too.

"Let us go a little further. I will admit that your second lieutenants and your ensigns are resigning after they finish the academies. They are boys who need some help. Your second lieutenants, your first lieutenants, your captains, your enlisted men need help. You give them a little aid. You are trying to see that they stay in.

"If the gentleman from Georgia wants some additional officers in the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, I have over 50 applicants who are trying to get into the Army right now. I will venture to say that there are not over 20 members in this chamber right now who do not have boys, officers in the recent war, wanting to get back into the Army, wanting to get back into the Navy, wanting to get into the Air Force and Marine Corps. But try to get one of them in."

Mr. Keating (R-N.Y.)—"I feel I must rise at the moment. I have been rather silent on this measure thus far. I want to support what the gentleman says on that point. I have had a number of very able young men, Reserve officers, who want to get back into active duty in the Army and Air Force and I have not succeeded. With one or two exceptions I have not been able to get them back into the armed services. This is one method of getting fine young men into the Army."

Mr. Sutton. "Mr. Chairman, this is a good bill so far as some sections are concerned, but, as a gentleman stated a while ago, it is a sugar-coated proposition so far as the pay in here is concerned. There should be two bills and this could be another contribution to the chairman of the Committee on Armed Services. You have some good provisions here so far as retirement is concerned, and I speak as a veteran. You have some good provisions here, you have a good bill, but your pay raise should be in an additional bill. Let us talk about pay raises. We are trying to economize now. The cost of living is going down. We are thinking about additional taxes. It looks as if we are going in the red $3,000,000,000 this year. We will need an increase in taxation. Yet you come along and want to give the top brass this additional money.

"Mr. Chairman, let us for a moment refer to the number that this will affect. You have 644 major generals and above, you have 248 brigadier generals or of corresponding rank. During the war they asked for 1,500 colonels to fight the war. Today you have 7,741 colonels, you have 17,025 lieutenant colonels, you have 25,675 majors. This information was secured from the House Armed Services Committee on May 20—today. These are not my figures. If you do not believe that you have that much top brass, just try to walk into the doors, any of you, over at the Pentagon building. That place, as I have maintained before, should have been established as a veterans hospital, and America would be better off today if that had been done, instead of a place for sinecures, for the top brass, that are coming in here and asking us for additional money.

"I do not know how you feel about it, but I know how I feel about this matter. You have got a good bill, in parts. I congratulate the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Kilday), on the sections in here relating to retirement and other provisions. But, I still maintain that we should have two bills instead of this one. I think we should send it back to the committee if we do not strike out this section 201 (a). If we strike out that section, I think we will have a good bill, but if we do not do that, I think it should go back to the committee with instructions that they do bring in a pay bill, and as to the other provisions bring in a separate bill."

Mr. Case (R-S.D.)—"I do not want to put it as baldly as it could be put. But think for yourself: Are we going to say to the enlisted man, 'We cut off your family allowance in order that we may raise the pay of the commissioned ranks?' Is that the record you want to defend?

Pay Bill Opponent Loses on Plea for Back Per Diem

Representative Pat Sutton, newly-elected Tennessee Democrat and strong opponent of pay increases for upper grades, is having troubles over his own service pay.

Representative Sutton served as an enlisted man and subsequently as a reserve officer in the Navy during the war. During parts of 1944 and 1945 he was given verbal orders by the Commander, Service Force, Seventh Fleet, to proceed to certain ports in the Southwest Pacific Area on temporary duty in connection with allied and enemy ordnance disposal and intelligence matters.

He subsequently applied for per diem for the periods he was on these trips and on 2 March 1949 the Comptroller ruled against him. He made further inquiry in pursuit of his claim and this week the Comptroller made public a letter to him again disallowing his claim on the basis that such per diem could not be paid "for other than the periods of actual travel by means other than Government vessel, even though movement from place to place was required."

The Comptroller pointed out that part of the period in question Ensign Sutton was engaged in combat action in Leyte, landing with the leading assault wave of an infantry regiment and that he was awarded the Army Silver Star and the Army Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action. The Chief of Naval Personnel had recommended that he be paid the per diem only for the periods during which he was actually traveling.

During the debate on the pay bill, Mr. Sutton spoke at length on the alleged private cars, chauffeurs, secretaries, commissary privileges, etc., which he claimed admirals and generals receive in addition to their pay.

"Reference has been made to the fine work of the Hook Committee, a committee of sound businessmen. According to the report, however, the Hook committee started its work 18 months ago and presented its report in December, 8 months ago. Are you going to write a pay bill for officers on the basis of economic conditions in the country as of 18 months ago or a year ago or even 6 months ago if writing that pay scale involves tying $400,000,000 or more to our annual budget from now on? Are we to freeze into the pay statutes a scale based upon the glowing inflationary picture of a year ago?"

Mr. Furcolo (D-Mass.)—"It seems to me, from my reading of the hearings and the bill and the committee report that the whole bill is top heavy. Their emphasis has been put on the top—the generals, the admirals, and the high-ranking officers.

In the debate, in what I have heard here, it has been the same thing. I do not know how many of those here have forgotten the time when they were in the service, but it sort of rises me up a little bit when I hear so much about what the high-ranking officers did and how they had all the brains and did all the work and won the war. Anyone in the service knows that the men who did the most of the work were the men that this bill is not taking care of. It was the average, every-day enlisted man, and we all know it."

Mr. Martin (R-Iowa)—"In my humble opinion this bill will go far toward stabilizing our armed services. I know that you can take any bill of this kind and pick it to pieces and criticize it for not being in complete accord wth your personal views.

"We need this legislation and the bill before us is well prepared and adequate for our needs. I will support it as vigorously as I can."

Mr. Rich (R-Pa.)—"Mr. Chairman, there is a lot of merit to this legislation, but there is a lot of demerit to its being called up at this particular time. Our Nation is in peril. Financial peril, bankruptcy. I would not want to be one to keep from any Army officer remuneration sufficient for him to do the work assigned to him in a way for the benefit of our country, and to instill in him that desire to achieve an esprit de corps that makes the finest type of armed forces, but I sometimes wonder whether we are not taking pretty fair care of the Army right now, and I wonder how much more we ought to do for them. None is starving. The officers all seem to like their job. They have security."

Mr. Sutton (D-Tenn.) — "Mr. Chairman, there seems to be a misconception that I am against the pay raise. I am not against a pay raise for the armed service, but I am for an equitable pay raise. Too long has the brass had the breaks. It was the civilian in uniform who won World War II, it was not those who sought refuge in the bombproof shelters of the Pentagon. It was your enlisted man, your second lieutenants, your first lieutenants, your captains, and they are the ones who are suffering, along with those in equivalent ranks. They are the boys that need a break, they are the boys that are entitled to a pay raise, and they need it badly. They should receive a considerable increase. I am in favor of giving it to them. If you will bring in a bill providing for a pay raise that takes care of the enlisted man and compensates him for taking away his family allowance, and include the ensigns, second lieutenants, first lieutenants, lieutenants (jg), lieutenants, and captains, then I am for it. On top of that, we should raise the generals just a little, but I am not in favor of giving the whole thing to the top brass. They do not need it as these other boys do.

"You speak of career boys. With 200,000 applicants right now for 9,000 billets, do not tell me we cannot get Army officers and Navy officers back in the service. I have them applying, and you have, too. Every member of this body knows numerous ex-officers who are seeking to reenlist in the Army or Navy. They were good officers. They went down through the valley of hell during World War II. You cannot tell me they are not competent and efficient enough to run the armed services of this great Government.

"A substitute is going to be offered for my amendment, and it is a good amendment, too. It will be offered by the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Bolling). It gives the second lieutenant, the first lieutenant, and the captain the same pay raise you are asking for and at the same time makes the pay raise on a gradual scale. I hope this committee will adopt the amendment to be offered by the gentleman from Missouri because it is a fair amendment. We do not want to disrupt the armed services. Heaven knows we do not. Above all, I believe in the armed forces of our country, but I believe in fair and equitable treatment of all men regardless of their rank.

"In spite of what the gentleman from Texas has said, I do not believe that he can specifically name one man in the enlisted men's group who, with his family, will have as much take-home pay after you repeal his family allowance.

"I will not go back to my district in the State of Tennessee, the grand old Volunteer State, that has been the Volunteer State in every war this country has ever had, and tell the wife of that enlisted man or the baby of that enlisted man, 'I am the one who took the food out of your mouth.' Oh, for shame.

"Let us look at it sensibly. Let us help the people who need some help. Let us help these enlisted men. Let us help the man who is gun fodder, and that is not demagogery—that is actuality, because I saw it. Let us give them their just dues and a fair break. Let us give the low ranks their break, then help the upper brackets. But take care of those boys who are actually doing the fighting, not the ones who are setting behind a desk at the Pentagon Building, and not the ones who have a chauffeur. May I say to my friend from Georgia that there were two cars sitting out there this morning in front of the Capitol. I asked the boy, 'What are you doing over here? Who is in this car?' 'I brought three officers over here to lobby for this bill.'"

Mr. Bolling (D-Mo.) (after offering an amendment, subsequently defeated by a vote of 41 to 98, to decrease the rates of pay provided in the bill for officers of the grade of major and above). "The bill before us represents an effort to make an important step forward in developing a sound national defense policy. It is vitally important that the United States not do in the coming years what we did in the twenties and thirties—drop our guard, as it were. In those years, our armed services were treated like unwanted orphans. They had inadequate recognition, inadequate appropriations, inadequate pay to maintain minimum morale, minimum equipment, minimum effectiveness. We suffered for this at Pearl Harbor in 1941 and we paid for it time and again on Bataan, at Wake, and in the shipping lanes of all oceans during 1942 and 1943.

"We must not make the same mistake again. The Armed Services Committee in this bill is attempting to take one of the many steps which we must take if we are to be adequately defended. * * *

"The members of the Armed Services Committee cannot be familiar with relatively minor detail. They concern themselves with strategic concepts, the broad outlines of our national defense. Why should they know that in the Army the gulf between a major and a captain is much greater than that between a captain and a lieutenant? Why should they know that a colonel often has a personal car and chauffeur and that almost without exception a general or flag officer has both?

"The amendment which I have offered takes into account the fact that our armed services must be more financially attractive if they are to retain and obtain the high type of young men and women that our national defense requires. But, more than that, my amendment takes into account the equally real fact that increasing rank carries with it substantial special privileges and benefits, some of them with large money value, others less tangible, but equally important—prestige is one of these latter."

Mr. Bates (R-Mass.)—"When we stop to consider the plaudits and tributes we are paying these boys, the best that can come from our minds and lips, awarding them medals of honor for participating in one of the grandest and most perfect achievements in the history of the Military Establishment, the Berlin airlift—we last week approved legislation to grant them a medal, and we applauded the general, the hero, who came home after he had done such a magnificent job in directing the destinies of our military forces in the European area—while we are giving these plaudits and speaking overwhelmingly of the splendid job they have done, we are permitting them to take a pay cut at the same time.

"What do I mean by a pay cut? I mean that every member of the Military Establishment this year is taking a pay cut below that which he had a year ago. We all know that during the war the enlisted men were exempted from paying any income tax and the officers were exempted up to $1,500 plus the family exemptions; we all know that that exemption came to an end on the first of January this year. As a result of that the enlisted men and officers too are taking a pay cut, the officers $34,000,000 this year below what they had in take-home pay a year ago, and the enlisted men $95,000,000 below what they received last year. This is the amount they will pay this year in taxes."

some discussion here today that really worries me, and that is this tearing down and unmercifully criticizing of what is known as the "brass." I do not hold any brief for the men in those offices, but they have devoted a lifetime to military service. Without the Arnolds, the Kenneys, and the Spaatzes, the Gilles, and others of their type, we would never have been ready to fight this last war in the air the way we did. In the Army and the Navy they also had these well-qualified men who prepared and executed the strategic concept that won the war. When they get $1,000 a month for the terrific responsibilities they have, they are not being overpaid, they are not getting more than they ought to get. You can talk all you want about these men hiding behind the Pentagon Building, but I sat here during the war and, frankly, every man I knew over there was eager to get to the combat lines and have a division or a regiment that he could command.

"We cannot build America by tearing down the men who are the leaders in various activities. There has been talk that they were behind the barriers and were in safe spots. Do you realize that dozens of generals were killed in this war? It worries me when you begin tearing down the leaders in the military, just like it worries me when you tear down the leaders in our industrial life. America was not built that way. There is room for all and we need not unreasonably tear the top officers apart to help the enlisted men, which we all want to do."

Mr. Gross (R-Iowa)—"How many dozen generals were killed?"

Mr. Johnson. "I do know 39 generals of the Army were killed in action and 8 admirals. I do not have the number in the Air Forces. The proportion was almost as great as it was among the enlisted men."

Mr. Gross. "You said that dozens were killed."

Mr. Johnson. "Yes; it was over three dozen —39; not counting Air Force generals. The proportion of those killed to the total number of generals was almost as great as it was in the case of enlisted men."

Mr. Gross. "You said dozens were killed."

Mr. Johnson. "Yes; over three dozen were killed."

Mr. Gross. "I do not believe that is accurate."

Mr. Johnson. "I know it is accurate."

Mr. Vinson. "My recollection is that some 25 brigadier generals were killed. A great many admirals were killed, as everyone knows."

Mr. Gross. "If the gentleman will yield, that is not a dozen."

Mr. Johnson. "That is two dozen right there, and the gentleman from Georgia is only referring to brigadier generals; with the major generals, 12, and lieutenant generals, 2; it is over three dozen. That does not include the Marine Corps and the Air Forces, and so on. There were over 16,700 officers in the Air Force who were killed in combat. The point is that America was not built that way, in this negative way of tearing down men who are successful. These men are at the top because they are successful. They are the kind of men we are trying to get from the lower ranks, so that when trouble comes tomorrow, or 10 years from tomorrow, we will have capable men to plan the strategy which will safeguard and make America secure."

Mr. Christopher (D-Mo.)—"Mr. Chairman, colleagues, ladies and gentlemen, for the greater portion of 3 days I have been in this House listening to gentlemen stand in the well of the House and beat their breasts and tear their hair because men who were receiving $600, $700, $800, $900, or $1,000 a year were being mistreated and were not getting enough money. Well, perhaps they are not getting enough money. I do not care if we give them more money as far as that is concerned, but I have come to the well of the House today to talk about the man who is receiving $100 or $120 or even $80 a month. If my colleagues have not already guessed it, I am going to let them in on a little secret today. Just rather frankly, sympathies are with the underdog. They go about 100 percent to the little fellow who always seems some way or another to get lost in the shuffle, and who does not seem to have but few friends."

Civil Service for Disabled Doctors

The Army Surgeon General has written to physicians and dentists who are drawing compensation as a result of war wounds and who are considered to be physically able to render professional service, inquiring as to their willingness to serve the Army Medical Department in a civilian capacity. This step was taken in view of the Army's present critical need of physicians and dentists.

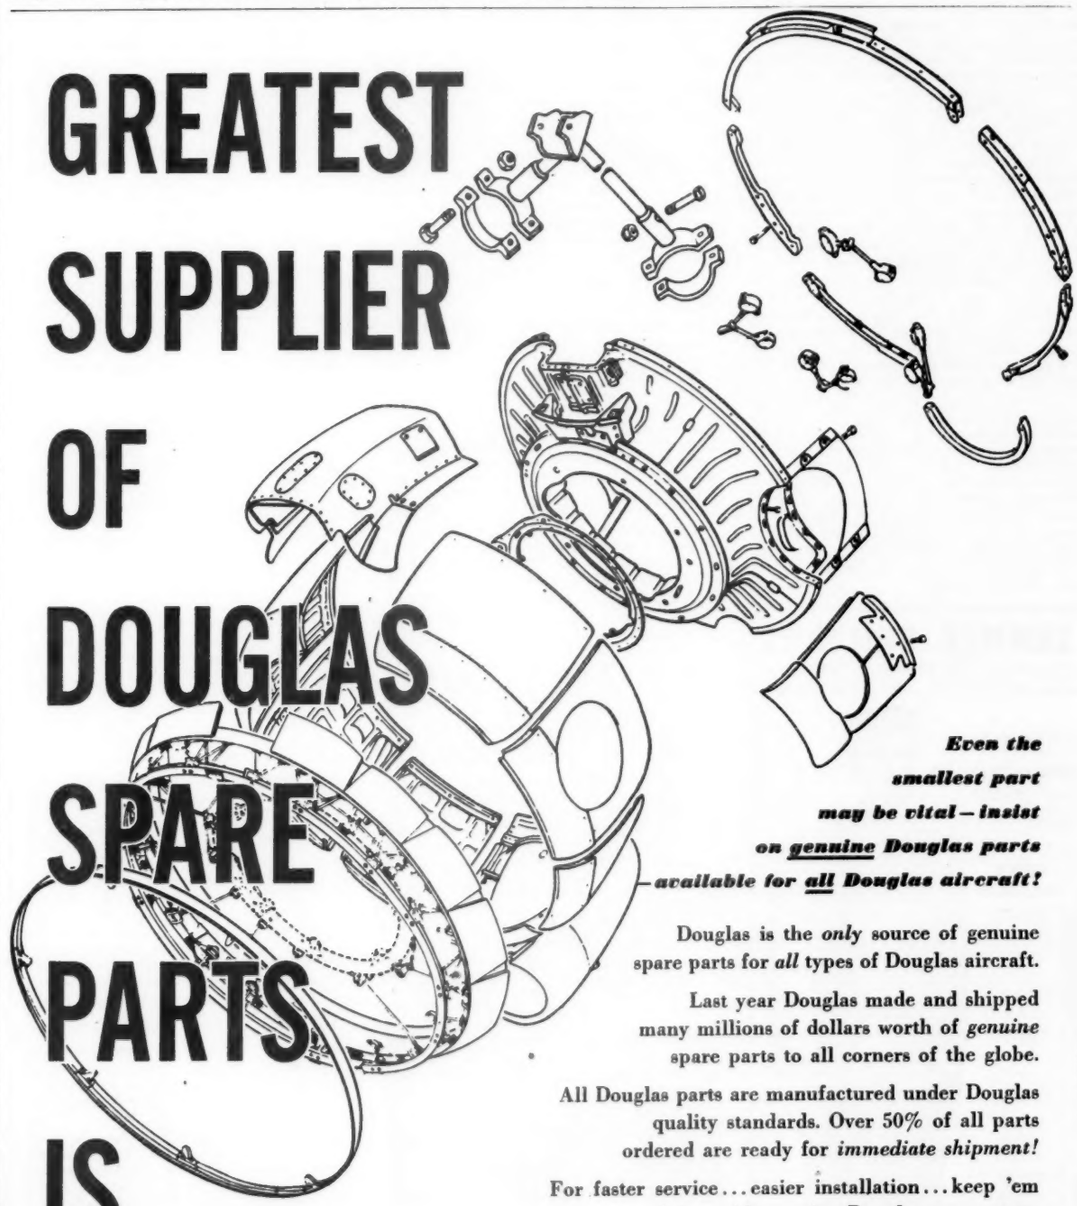

The letters stated that "It is possible for you to be employed in a civilian status without conflicting with the Federal Dual Compensation Status, as you can, in addition to the Civil Service pay, continue to receive disability retirement benefits."

NME Order to JCS

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson has instructed the Joint Chiefs of Staff that their action concerning the proposed aerial tests between the B-36 bomber and Air Force and Navy fighter planes are to be made "without any regard whatever to any political implications that may flow from your recommendations."

Colonel Johnson, in a memorandum to the JCS, declared that "if any such political implications should arise, they will be matters for consideration by the President and the Secretary of Defense and should have no place whatsoever in the study of this subject by the Joint Chiefs of Staff."

Colonel Johnson said the series of impartial tests involving the huge bomber and fighter aircraft "constitutes one part of a much larger problem which the Joint Chiefs of Staff have been considering for a longer period of course." He continued: "I refer, of course, to the larger and continuing problem of having constantly available an up-to-date joint evaluation of the strategic bombing results which we could expect to bring about, in the event that acts of aggression directed against us should make it necessary for us to launch retaliatory bombing operations."

Refuse to Cancel Navy Day

The President of the Navy League, which sponsors Navy Day celebrations throughout the country, has informed Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson that he sees "no valid reason for breaking the continuity of 27 years of observances."

In the face of the order abolishing individual Service celebrations in favor of a Natonal Defense Day, Mr. Frank A. Hecht told Colonel Johnson that "the unanimous sentiment I find throughout the Navy League is that we should continue to sponsor a Navy celebration as we have since 1922."

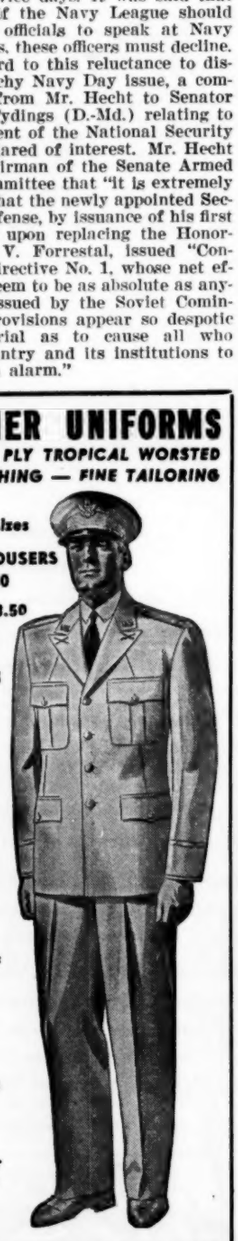

That the Navy League will organize Navy Day activities with or without cooperation from the Navy is affirmed by Mr. Hecht. "We realize that should the cooperation of the Navy Department be denied us," he declared, "Navy Day would perhaps lose some of its effectiveness—but are assured that a worth-while Navy Day can be promoted, nevertheless." He said "we believe there should always be a Navy Day."

Defense officials said this week that there would be no relaxing of Secretary Johnson's ban against participation in separate Service days. It was said that this means if the Navy League should invite Navy officials to speak at Navy Day banquets, these officers must decline.

With regard to this reluctance to discuss the touchy Navy Day issue, a communication from Mr. Hecht to Senator Millard E. Tydings (D.-Md.) relating to the amendment of the National Security Act was declared of interest. Mr. Hecht told the Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee that "it is extremely regrettable that the newly appointed Secretary of Defense, by issuance of his first major order upon replacing the Honorable James V. Forrestal, issued "Consolidation Directive No. 1, whose net effect would seem to be as absolute as anything ever issued by the Soviet Cominform. Its provisions appear so despotic and dictatorial as to cause all who love our country and its institutions to view it with alarm."

U. S. NAVY & MARINE CORPS

In his letter to Colonel Johnson, Mr. Hecht said that "if it is considered wise and in the national interest to have a joint patrotic service day, we in the Navy League will do our utmost to insure its success."

But he remained firm against terminating the Navy Day tradition. Mr. Hecht maintained that unlike Army Day and Air Force Day, the 27 Oct., commemoration of Navy Day "always has been a civilian affair, conceived, promoted, staged and financed by civilians." "This," he continued, "has not been true of Army Day and Air Force Day. Air Force Day has been largely run by the air force, with advertising paid from recruiting appropriations."

Navy League officials told the ARMY and NAVY JOURNAL that the organization spent $10,000 last year sponsoring Navy Day ceremonies throughout the country.

Emphasizing that the Navy League is not a veterans organization and that membership is denied those in active service, Mr. Hecht wrote Colonel Johnson that because the Air Force Association is a veterans organization and because a large percentage of its members are still in active service, it cannot qualify as a strictly civilian organization. "Therefore," the Navy League president asserted, "its actions are subject to some control by the NME."

The clear inference here was that the Navy League, as a civilian organization, is not bound by any order from the National Military Establishment.

It was learned that the Navy Day celebration will be high on the agenda of a meeting of the Navy League's board of directors at Chicago on 1 June.

The Navy League was given official sanction to sponsor 1949 Navy Day ceremonies by former Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan on 8 Feb., prior to Secretary Johnson's order for a National Defense Day to replace the individual Service celebrations. Mr. Sullivan, according to League officers, said he was pleased that the Navy League should be at the "helm" once again in sponsoring Navy Day.

Naval Forces in Alaska

expansion and reopening of activities should the need arise.

The basic functions of the naval bases in Alaska are to provide limited support for incidental vessels including dry-docking facilities, general logistic support such as repair and upkeep, supply of provisions, general stores and ordnance for the Naval District, Sea Frontier, and local service craft. The District provides for the support of reconnaissance aircraft, anti-submarine operations, carrier air groups, fleet logistic support wing and U. S. Coast Guard Search and Rescue Detachment. In conjunction with the Coast Guard the Navy is constantly called upon to afford rescue and mercy operations to the people of the scattered islands and to ships operating in the rough Alaskan and North Pacific waters. At times practically all the facilities of the District are in use helping those in distress.

In all planning and in all operations there are two main problems evident in the District, which comprises all the territory of Alaska: weather and distance. The weather constitutes a major barrier to construction work during a great part of the year.

High winds are also an obstacle to air and sea operations as well as a destroyer of buildings and light structures. For the most part the climate is cold, wet, disagreeable and foggy, particularly in the Aleutian Chain and the Alaskan Peninsula. This area has been termed the originating center—"weather kitchen"—of the northern hemisphere. Storms which are suddenly brewed here affect the weather not only in Alaska but in Canada and the northern half of the United States. In combating these conditions the Navy maintains aerological stations at Kodiak and Adak and a small weather detachment at Attu which sends forth, to the ships and aircraft within the area, and to the states, a constant flow of weather reports and pertinent aerological data.

Alaska, including the Aleutians, when superimposed on the United States stretches from the east coast to the west coast and from Canada to Mexico and comprises a half million square miles of land. Such distances impose an astounding logistic problem, especially in view of the fact that the territory of Alaska is a frontier area liberally endowed with islands, thousands of miles of waterways and a rugged, mountainous interior. Modern improvements, highways, railroads, shipping, etc., are at a minimum, and frequently have few connecting points. As a result, most of the Territory, especially the Aleutians, remains isolated. No real commercial enterprises are flourishing in the Aleutian Chain.

With the weather a preventing factor and nothing but extinct volcanoes, glaciers and barren slopes to meet the eye, the Aleutian Islands are commercially poor and so there are no established local shipping routes in the area. Costs of travel, food, material, transportation and other necessary items for operations, are, therefore, very high as compared with the prices known in the United States.

The Navy's northernmost base in the Alaskan area is the Naval Petroleum Reserve Number Four at Pt. Barrow, Alaska, an outpost just inside the Arctic Circle. Here scientists and representatives from Washington, Stanford, Naval Ordnance Laboratory, the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution and other leading research institutions and colleges throughout America, which are under contract to the Office of Naval Research, are exploring the mysteries of Arctic life and the ways and means of survival in subarctic weather.

An Arctic research laboratory, well equipped, has been constructed there. The Bureau of Yards and Docks maintains this arctic test station at Pt. Barrow for the study of fuel oils, lubricants and other cold weather problems which the Navy encounters in the frozen northland. A study is also being made there of cold weather clothing for non-flying personnel.

A fair percentage of the married Naval and civilian personnel are now afforded housing in the District. These living quarters are neither sufficient in numbers to provide all who apply throughout their normal eighteen-month-tour of duty, nor adequate since they are, with few exceptions, converted barracks and quonset huts, except in Kodiak where there are some permanent family quarters for both officers and enlisted personnel. Grade schools are located on the bases and are operated and accredited by the Territory of Alaska with funds supplied mainly by the Navy Department.

The present day activities of the Seventeenth Naval District cannot be accurately described without some mention of the operation of the unified command in Alaska under Commander in Chief Alaska. The Navy has entered whole-heartedly into the unification program and is doing much joint planning with the Army and the Air Force.

The District, notwithstanding all the problems confronting it, however, is able to meet its mission and to expand the nucleus as required. This was amply demonstrated during the recent fleet exercise MICOWEX which was held in and around Kodiak during January and February of 1949. This exercise brought some thirty-four ships of all types into the area along with eighteen thousand men, including two thousand marines, who landed to test cold weather equipment for two weeks.

U. S. AIR FORCE

USAF Medical Service

National Military Establishment officials this week were working out final details concerning Secretary of Defense Louis A. Johnson's order to create a separate medical department for the Air Force.

At the same time, Secretary Johnson established a Medical Services Division within the OSD to establish and control general policies, standards and programs for the medical services of the three military departments.

In effect, these twin actions "unified" the medical services at the same time that another medical department within the Armed Forces was added.

Recent Congressional testimony of Lt. Gen. I. H. Edwards, USAF, Air Force personnel chief, is particularly interesting in the light of these developments. General Edwards told Congress that "the Air Force position has been all the time that we should have a unified medical service consisting of all three medical departments." Short of that, he said, "we want parity with the Army and the Navy."

Maj. Gen. Malcolm C. Grow, the Air Surgeon, redesignated as Surgeon General of the U. S. Air Force, has been elevated to an organizational and functional position directly under the Chief of Staff, U. S. Air Force. This same organizational pattern will be maintained throughout the Air Force.

General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF, Chief of Staff, emphasized the great career opportunities that exist in the newly created U. S. Air Force Medical Service and announced that Air Force plans are designed to correct the major objections of professional people to a career in the Armed Forces. Toward this end, housing will be made available for medical officers and their families at all Air Bases where such facilities exist. Stability of assignment of Air Force medical personnel will be emphasized and transfers will be held to the essential minimum.

Secretary Johnson authorized the transfer for temporary duty of 100 Army and 100 Navy medical officers to help meet the shortage of medical personnel in the Air Force.

The Navy has released details concerning procedure for its officers who desire to serve with the Air Force Medical Service for a maximum period of two years. While on this duty, they will wear the Navy uniform. Thirty-five Naval officers will be assigned to the Air Force by 15 July for these duties and the remaining 65 will be assigned at a later date to be set by the Director of Medical Services. Regular and active reserve medical officers of the Navy were urged to submit applications for this service to the Commandant of their local Naval District by 15 June.

Army officials have announced also that officers may request transfer to the Air Force before 1 July. Insofar as permanent transfers to the Air Force are concerned, the authority for Army officers to join the Air Force expires 26 July.

That the Air Force is beset with a serious shortage of medical department officers is evidenced in the following statistics. The Air Force needs 1179 doctors, but has only 953 on duty and by the end of the year will have only 667 doctors, despite the addition of the 200 officers from the Army and Navy.

Dental officer requirements are 723, but only 278 are now on active duty. Only 650 nurses are in the Air Force, compared with a requirement for 895. A total of 109 veterinarians are needed, compared with 62 on duty. Forty-five Women's Medical Specialist Corps officers are needed, but only 22 are on duty, while there is need for 592 Medical Service Corps officers, with only 516 now serving in the Air Force.

Meantime, there was much speculation as to whether a civilian or military doctor would be given the post as Director of Medical Services, which doubtless will become the top medical post in the Armed Services.

To Study B-36 Program

Chairman Carl Vinson (D.-Ga.) said this week that the House Armed Services Committee is preparing to investigate the Air Force's B-36 program, following criticism in Congress of recent cancellations of orders for other planes in favor of increased purchases of the giant bomber.

The Senate Armed Services Committee called upon Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, a former director of the Consolidated-Vultee Aircraft Corp., which builds the B-36 bombers, to answer charges of Congressmen who maintain that too much of the Nation's security is being risked by the B-36 program.

Rep. James E. Van Zandt (R.-Pa.) declared that to obtain funds for the B-36 contracts "the Air Force has ruthlessly cancelled orders from four other aircraft companies. I am informed on unimpeachable authority," he continued, "that the Air Force, under Mr. Symington, took this series of actions in spite of the fact that its flying men only a year ago were ready to abandon Consolidated B-36's on the grounds that they were wholly unsatisfactory bombers."

F-80s to Germany

General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF, Chief of Staff, has announced that a flight of 15 Lockheed F-80 Shooting Stars would go to Germany as replacements for the 36th Fighter Group stationed at Furstenfeldbruck, Germany.

The flight left Selfridge AFB, Mich., 25 May and went to Dow AFB, Me. Thence the route will include Goose Bay, Labrador; Blue West One, Greenland; Keflavik, Iceland; Kinloss, Scotland; and Manston, England, ending at Furstenfeldbruck AFB.

The flight included four two-place TF-80C's, 11 F-80B's, one Douglas C-54 and two Douglas C-47 transports, and one Boeing B-29 weather reconnaissance plane.

The F-80's will be replacements to handle the normal attrition of the 36th Fighter Group. The two-seat TF-80's will be used for instrument training, gunnery instruction and transition training.

The ocean crossing will be under the command of Lt. Col. Irwin H. Dregne, Commanding Officer of the 56th Fighter Group at Selfridge AFB. Col. David C. Schilling of Air Force Headquarters will be the Air Force project officer and will fly one of the F-80's. Colonel Schilling was a wartime commander of the 56th Fighter Group and the planes will be delivered to two former commanders who preceded him. They are Col. John C. Crosthwaite, present 36th Fighter Wing commander, who commanded the 56th in 1942, and Col. Hubert L. Zempke, present 36th Fighter Group Commander, who commanded it from 1942 until August, 1944.

Other former and present 56th fighter pilots who will join their former commanding officers are Maj. Donavon F. Smith and Capt. Frank Klibbe, maintenance and supply officer for the mission. Flight leaders from the 56th Group will include Colonel Dregne, Colonel Schilling, Maj. Samuel V. Blair, and Captain Klibbe. Four of the pilots will be from the 4th Fighter Group, Langley AFB, Hampton, Va.

ConAC Tennis Tourney

The Continental Air Command tennis championship tournament will be held 27 June through 1 July at the Rockville Tennis Club, Mo. The top six individuals will be selected to represent the Continental Air Command in the National Air Force Tournament to be held 10 through 16 July in the Washington, D. C., area. Inter-service tournament for the Leach cup will be held 29, 30 July in Washington, D. C. The Navy will be host. Participants representing the Air Force will be selected at the conclusion of the National Air Force Tournament.

Avoiding all personal and political bias, its influence will be directed solely to the inculcation of sound military ideas, and to the elevation of the public service in all its departments."—From Vol. 1, No. 1, of the Army and Navy Journal, published August 29, 1863.

SATURDAY, MAY 28, 1949

OUR PRIORITY LIST

1. Immediate reenactment of the law authorizing special military exemptions from the Federal Income Tax, broadened to exclude all retired pay from taxation.
2. Increase of Service pay for active and retired personnel.
3. Prompt construction of suitable family quarters for commissioned and enlisted personnel at all permanent stations.
4. Early attainment and continued maintenance of a fully manned 70-group Air Force, equipped with the best modern aircraft, and supported by a sound basic law for the Air Force.
5. Rapid expansion of our submarine fleet and accelerated development of anti-submarine vessels and equipment, with continued experimentation and construction of new naval types.
6. Organization and training of a balanced Mobile Ground Force, of sufficient strength and ready, with complete modern equipment, for immediate action in a National Emergency.
7. Liberal compensation for disability and service retirement of officers and enlisted men, with provision for retirement in highest grade satisfactorily held at any time.
8. Death benefits for survivors of military personnel based on today's higher living costs.
9. Increase in per diem allowances to compensate personnel for all expenses incurred while traveling on official duty.
10. Provision for the education of the children of Service personnel on active duty without expense where free public schools are not available.
11. Reimbursement for use of private automobiles on official business.
12. Close supervision and constant restudy of Service promotion and elimination policies to assure the prevention and prompt correction of injustices and inequities.
13. Continued scientific research and development in all new and unconventional methods of warfare, including atomic, biological, and radiological weapons, guided missiles and psychological warfare. Close liaison with industry and labor as elements of the National Defense team.
14. Development and improvement of the organization and training of the National Guard, Organized Reserves, and other civilian components, with proper inactive training pay and appropriate training facilities for all elements.

THE recommittal of the Kilday Pay Bill to the Armed Services Committee by the decisive vote of the House of Representatives threatens the death of this long-awaited measure, vitally essential to the morale of the Uniformed Services. It is encouraging to note that immediate steps are being taken by the members of the Committee and representatives of the National Military Establishment to work out a compromise acceptable to sufficient numbers of the opposition to assure its enactment. Passage of the Kilday Bill this week failed because of an economy drive on the part of a considerable number of House members, many of them politically opposed to the Administration, and because others thought that the gradual elimination of family allowances would operate to reduce enlisted compensation, while that of high-ranking officers was being substantially increased. There was an impression, entirely erroneous, that the top officers were profiting at the expense of the enlisted personnel. The tragic truth is that many Representatives, thinking they were helping the enlisted men, voted to kill a bill that would have been of tremendous benefit to every career soldier, sailor and airman. Increases in enlisted pay and allowances in the bill amounted to $456 million. This was offset to a considerable extent by the withdrawal of family allowances of $314 million, but there was still a net gain in enlisted pay and allowances of $142 million. Better retirement privileges and other benefits were provided for career servicemen. Apparently the House members who spoke for the enlisted men failed to understand that the temporary relief provided by family allowances is authorized by a wartime statute that expires automatically with the termination of the emergency by Presidential proclamation or Congressional resolution. Permanent pay raises are desperately needed to replace this temporary measure. Much was said on the House floor relative to percentage pay increases for officers. However, the individual receiving the greatest percentage increase in permanent pay under the rejected bill is a married Army corporal, or corresponding grade in other Services, of seven or more years' service. At present his pay is $110 per month. Under the Kilday Bill he would receive $210 per month, including $67.50 rental allowance, an increase of nearly 100 per cent. Of course, he is now eligible for family allowances, based on the number of dependents, but he will lose these benefits with the termination of the emergency, which may occur in the relatively near future. On the other hand, the pay scales in the Kilday Bill were intended as permanent legislation. The failure of the House to act favorably on the Pay Bill is almost incomprehensible. Unless prompt action is taken to revive the measure there will be little possibility of pay raises at this session of Congress, and, as some Congressional leaders gloomily predict, perhaps none for several years. The net result will be, that of all the public servants of the United States the members of the Uniformed Services will be the only ones to receive a pay cut. The termination of tax exemptions for military personnel last January operates to reduce the take-home pay of every officer by from $25 to $40 per month, and that of enlisted men by varying amounts. Yet, the members of Congress have increased their pay from $10,000 to $12,500 per year, and have added $2,500 in tax-free allowances. Generous increases in pay and allowances for the President, the Vice President, and the Speaker of the House have been voted by the present Congress. The last Congress raised the pay of practically all civilian Federal employes. Bills to provide higher pay for civilian officials and employes are pending. Only Service personnel thus far have been definitely excluded from this program of increased salaries.

THE Secretary of Defense has requested the Congress to authorize $623 million for new construction projects for the Armed Forces. Of this amount it is proposed to expend $152 million for family housing in the United States and overseas during the next fiscal year. This would provide about 7,500 sets of quarters, scarcely a start on the many thousands required to provide adequate housing for the dependents of officers and enlisted men at military stations. Nevertheless, it is a beginning, and Congress should give the project its prompt approval. There have been recent indications of a marked Congressional swing toward heavy cuts in Government spending. However, in this instance real economy would be effected by providing new quarters for those in the military service. Most of those who will be cared for in the new housing are now drawing cash rental allowances, because of the unavailability of Government quarters. The savings that would be made, therefore, through providing such personnel with quarters and withdrawing their rental allowances, would go far toward amortizing the cost of the proposed project. Further, and of the greatest importance, provision for adequate family quarters would greatly elevate the morale of officers and noncommissioned officers and materially add to their efficiency. Large numbers of military personnel now pay rents far in excess of their monetary allowances for inferior and inadequate shelter. Lack of appropriate quarters, as well as insufficient pay, is a major reason for the difficulty in procuring and retaining highly qualified personnel for the Armed Services.

Unfairness in Integration

Editor, ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL:

I wish the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL would investigate the injustice and unfairness of the integration system, permanent promotion, and temporary promotion system as it affects officers on duty since 1939 starting at the age of 21.

When integrated into the Regular Army in the first group of officers, I lost 2½ years' service credit for purpose of promotion. Now I have actually ten years' continuous service, but haven't a chance at temporary promotion to major, while people with only half the actual service are being promoted because of constructed service, or the age being greater.

When is the Army going to stop discriminating against integrated officers and give them credit for full time served?

Care of Retired Personnel

Editor, ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL:

Almost 48 years ago I made a contract with the United States Army. My contract was that I would receive $13.00 one month and $12.75 the next month for a period of three years, obey all lawful orders, and if I serve 30 years in the Army I would be retired, and then the Army Medical Department would care for my health as long as I live. I served to the best of my humble ability 38 active years and 10 years on the retired list.

God has been good to me and so has the Army. Fortunately I do not require much health attention. However, there are two matters of health attention furnished by the Army Medical Department which I am denied. One is hard of hearing treatment and necessary aids, and the other is Dental Treatment.

Let us see what the Veterans' Administration does for its beneficiaries who qualify for treatment by not being dishonorably discharged.

Hearing Aids and Treatments: Recently I saw an up-to-date single pack Western Electric Hearing Aid in the possession of a former associate, and besides, he gets any hard of hearing treatment or hearing aid as may be necessary furnished by Veterans' Administration. Army Retired Personnel are denied both.

Dental Treatment: In Veterans' Administration, a veteran can even go to his local dentist for dental treatment and the bill is paid by the Veterans' Administration. Army Retired Personnel are denied treatment and advised to go to their local dentists with their depreciated dollar to pay for what they can get.

What is the solution? The primary excuse for Dentists in any of the Armed services is care of the teeth. They have no other function in the services. Dental officers now in the service who do no actual dental work due to their high rank should be required to do dental work. Finally if they cannot get dentists in the Army they should be drafted like other Americans who may have to die in combat.

A report of the spotting of two Navy airplanes with the Asiatic Fleet during the long-range battle practice of the USS Huron on 19 March is exciting deep interest in the Navy Department. The fall of the shots from the Huron was spotted from the planes and photographs were taken of the salvos. During the operation radio communication with the planes was maintained satisfactorily.

U. S. COAST GUARD

SECRETARY of Defense Louis A. Johnson's order calling for the elimination of separate celebrations for Army Day, Navy Day and Air Force Day will not affect commemoration of Coast Guard Day, 4 Aug., according to latest word from officials at Headquarters. Unless present plans are changed, the Coast Guard, functioning in peacetime under the Secretary of the Treasury, will celebrate its birthday on 4 Aug.

Memorial Chapel Drive

The campaign to raise $450,000 for construction of a memorial chapel at the Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn., has passed the halfway mark, with $229,000 already contributed. Coast Guard officials are hoping to complete the drive by Coast Guard Day. The Coast Guard Auxiliary of the 11th Coast Guard District, Long Beach, Calif., has made a gift of the carillon, which will be similar to the one installed in the U. S. Naval Academy Chapel.

Postgraduate Training

Thirteen Coast Guard officers have been selected for postgraduate training, it was reported this week. Six will go to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, one to Stanford University, five to flight training, and one to the National War College.

Capt. John L. Steinmetz will attend the National War College.

Ordered to M.I.T. for training in naval construction and engineering are Lts. (jg) Richard W. Goode, Gerald G. Brown, Harrison B. Smith and Clinton E. McAuliffe, while Lts. (jg) Donald E. Ullery and Robert C. Philipps will study electrical engineering at the same institution.

Lt. Comdr. Joseph J. McClelland will major in personnel and administration at Stanford University. Assigned to flight training are Lts. (jg) Richard P. Arlander, James A. Dillian, Jack D. Lyon, Christopher S. Changaris and Shirl J. Stephany.

AVP Manning Program

Coast Guard personnel officials, recapitulating effects of the AVP Manning Program, said this week that the manning of the 13 AVP's, following the manning of Winnebago and Pontchartrain, has required the transfer of more than 1,000 men in less than 11 months. Where possible, the men selected for this duty were drawn from those who had requested such duty or from those already stationed in the vicinity of the home port of the vessel to which they were assigned. The final orders which completed the enlisted personnel assignments to the AVP Program were issued this month.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—The proposals of Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky for dealing with current German problems at the Paris Four-Power Conference came as no surprise. Neither did their prompt rejection by Secretary of State Dean Acheson and his British and French colleagues.

Mr. Vishinsky wanted to turn back the clock and resurrect the old Allied Control Council for the government of Germany. That body was established by the Potsdam Conference in July 1945 and ceased to function more than a year ago when the Russian representatives walked out just prior to the institution of the Berlin hunger blockade which the Allied air lift turned into a fiasco.

The Soviet foreign minister would scrap the recently formed West German federal government and instead would set up an Economic Council of Germans on which the Communist-controlled East Germans would have an equal voice with those of the west. Likewise Mr. Vishinsky would abolish the Ruhr authority and place the industries of that industrial area under the Allied Control Council and representatives of countries bordering on Germany, including Communist Poland and Czechoslovakia, as well as Denmark, Holland and Belgium. He would undo all the remarkable progress that has been made in the past year toward the political and economic recovery of West Germany. As to Berlin Mr. Vishinsky proposed a new election for the government of the entire city, under the direction of the inter-Allied Kommandatura, which has been defunct for more than a year.

Obviously, Mr. Vishinsky had no real hope of securing acceptance by the western powers of all, or perhaps any, of his proposals, but presented them as bargaining points. If he insists on their acceptance the conference is foredoomed to failure. However, there are other issues on the agenda and it seems probable that Russia will try for the most advantageous compromise possible.

All of the powers would favor the establishment of a unified German government, but this would involve defining the eastern boundary of Germany, a subject which Russia may hesitate to discuss. The western boundary of Poland, a Soviet satellite, is well within what is almost universally regarded as the natural territory of the Reich. Any boundary adjustments at all satisfactory to the German people would inevitably involve areas now occupied by the Poles. They will give it up at Russian insistence, but such a transaction would not enhance Soviet popularity in Poland. On the other hand, failure to restore to Germany some of her lost eastern territory would insure lasting enmity against Russia.

At the opening of the Paris conference the Russian delegates continued their highly conciliatory attitude that had characterized their negotiations that led to lifting the Berlin blockade. They readily agreed to discuss the unification of Germany, and subsequently the Austrian peace settlement. They appeared not at all put out at the rejection of their suggestion that Japanese peace terms be included in the conference agenda. Though the Russian viewpoint almost always differed from that of the western powers there were no tedious Red recriminations that were so evident at previous conferences. Wary western diplomats were at a loss to account for such a revolutionary change, and were puzzled as to what it might portend.

Ratification of the constitution of western Germany was completed this week, with approval by 10 of the 11 West German states. Bavaria, alone, rejected the formal approval of the constitution, but agreed to accede to the new government after the other ten had taken affirmative action. While the way is open for the Soviet zone to join the new federation, there is every indication that it will not do so. Russia apparently plans to support a rival government in East Germany, to be formed by the Communist People's Council chosen last week.

Berlin was torn this week by a tumultous railroad strike which interrupted the movement of trains into western Berlin. This cessation of rail traffic did not seriously affect the supply of the western sectors of the city, as the air lift continued and highway traffic was not interrupted. Thousands of workers struck against the Soviet-controlled railways, demanding that they be paid in western marks, rather than those of the east, which are worth only a quarter as much. Communist strike-breakers were engaged by the railroads and Soviet-controlled German police attempted to quell the strikers. Gun fire resulted and there were many casualties with a few persons killed. At the insistence of Allied authorities Soviet police and strikebreakers left the western sectors of Berlin and violence subsided.

On the other side of the world Communists captured the great port of Shanghai, the fourth largest city in the world. Nationalist troops which had made a brave show of defending the city for several weeks withdrew to Woosung, where escape vessels were waiting. There was still some fighting north of the city, but is was clear that with the fall of Shanghai the Red conquest of North China was practically complete. The Communist troops occupying Shanghai are apparently well-trained, well-disciplined, and well-led. Their appearance and morale indicate a considerable superiority over the disheartened nationalists.

The conquest of much of South China within the next few months was freely predicted by informed observers. Indeed many feel that the new capital at Canton is already endangered by local Reds, as well as by the Communist armies from the north. United States authorities have again urged Americans in China, many of whom are at Canton, to leave the country. Those remaining in China are largely missionaries and business men, many of whom have spent most of their lives in the Orient and who do not plan to leave.

Apparently taking their cue from Russia the Czech authorities have taken a more conciliatory attitude toward the United States. An evidence of this was noted in the release of two American soldiers who had been sentenced only recently in Czechoslovakia to long prison terms on absurd charges of espionage. These men were recruits who had wandered across the boundary while absent without leave. The Czechs professed to regard them as spies and made a great fuss about their trial and imprisonment, at first ignoring American protests. However, with the advent of the new entente the soldiers were released and are now in an American guardhouse awaiting trial for their unauthorized absence from their organization.

In a revised legislative program President Truman and his Congressional leaders call for early Senate ratification of the North Atlantic Pact, continuance of reciprocal trade agreements, and funds for the European Recovery Program. Apparently legislation to provide military assistance for Atlantic Pact countries, as well as a considerable part of the President's domestic program, will go over until next session. The present Congressional insistence on economy in order to avoid tax increases, as evidenced by the deep cuts made in Economic Cooperation funds by the House Appropriations Committee, and similar action on other measures, apparently persuaded the Administration that this was not an appropriate time to seek additional funds for military aid for Europe.

New Uniforms for Air Guard—Officers of the Air National Guard are authorized to wear the new type Air Force uniforms. Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, Chief of the National Guard Bureau has announced. More than 6,100 Air Guard officers, both rated and non-rated, have been advised through official channels they may don the new uniforms as soon as they can obtain them. National Guard officers, like those of the regular services, buy their own uniforms. Air Guard enlisted men had previously been authorized to wear the new distinctive insignia now worn by enlisted men of the regular Air Force. Issue of these items has been held up by priority considerations but will begin as soon as the supply becomes adequate.

Carrier Escalators—Moving stairways soon will be helping jet flight operations aboard U. S. Navy aircraft carriers. This is revealed in an announcement by the Westinghouse Elevator Division, Jersey City, N. J., that it is building three specially-designed electric stairways, one to be installed aboard each of three carriers of the Essex class. These first moving stairways to be used aboard any warship will be capable of carrying 30 Navy pilots a minute from the hangar deck up to the flight deck 28 feet above.

Atomic Ship Propulsion—For more than three years engineers and scientists of the General Electric Company have been working on problems connected with the propulsion of U. S. Navy ships by atomic power. This week, it was reported that while results are encouraging, application of atomic energy to ship propulsion, as well as to other power uses are still a number of years away. Howard P. Bish, manager of G-E's Aircraft, Federal and Marine Divisions, in an interview at the spring meeting of the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers in San Francisco, stated that the phase of work on which the most effort has been expended thus far is concerned with heat transfer; that is, with getting the heat, generated from an atomic energy source, to the place where it can be utilized. Studies to determine the most suitable type of atomic reactor for this service, and to solve the problems of control are also being carried on, he added.

Track Tread for B-50—The world's first track-tread type landing gear for medium or heavy bombers has successfully completed its first taxi tests by Boeing Airplane Company on a 164,000-pound B-50 Superfortress. Designed and built for the Air Force, the new Boeing experimental landing gear is being used to investigate the possibilities of utilizing unimproved, un-paved runways for the operation of heavy bombers, tankers and transport aircraft. Consisting of double tractor-like rubber treads for the main landing gear units, and a single tread unit in place of the nose-wheel, the new system completely retracts when the airplane is in flight. Top speed of the 400-mile per hour Superfort is not affected, the company said.

Largest installation of its type ever made, the track-treads have a "footprint" area three times that of the usual double tire landing gear of the Boeing B-50. This will make it possible for the newly-equipped bomber to operate from a greater number of variety of bases. Each landing gear unit consists of an endless rubber and steel wire belt, which rotates around a series of grooved drums and bogies, and looks much like the tread system of an Army tank. Rubber belt treads on the double main units are each 20 inches wide, and have a ground contact 46 inches in length. The nose gear ground contact area measures 16 by 36 inches. The nose gear retains the hydraulic steering feature of the standard B-50.

Army Chaplains to AF—Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson this week authorized the transfer, on a voluntary basis, of Army chaplains to the Air Force in numbers and grades proportionate to the overall military strengths and grades of the two departments The transfers must be completed by 26 July, since statutory authority for such moves terminates on that date.

The transfer authority results from Colonel Johnson's order transferring functions of the Air Chaplains from the Army Corps of Chaplains. This action paralleled another order which established a separate medical department in the Air Force. Both orders were predicted several months ago in ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL stories.

At the present time, the senior chaplain in the Air Force holds the rank of colonel. He is Chaplain (Col.) Charles I. Carpenter. Presumably with the creation of a separate chaplains' organization for the Air Force, the rank of the Air Chaplain will be increased. The Deputy Chief of Chaplains in the Army holds the rank of brigadier general, while the Chief of Chaplains is a major general.

There are now 458 chaplains on duty with the Air Force against a requirement of 540. By rank, the Air Force has nine colonels who are chaplains, 41 lieutenant colonels, 99 majors, 266 captains and 43 first lieutenants.

Canned Aircraft Engines—Air Force technical experts have gone into the canning business. At Kelly AFB, Tex., aircraft engines will be packed in nine-foot, 2,700-pound metal containers for shipment to Europe and other overseas areas. The canned engines will be buoyant and can be tossed over the side of a supply ship and towed ashore—an obvious advantage at invasion beachheads. Air Force officials maintain that the engines can be preserved as efficiently as a can of corn. Air Force and Navy research on the horsepower canning project was initiated during World War II.

Honor General Pershing—The late General of the Armies John J. Pershing was honored Sunday, 22 May, at the 22d annual massing of colors in Washington Cathedral. The ceremonies were sponsored jointly by the Military Order of the World Wars and the Washington Cathedral with 113 veteran and civic organizations participating. The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, described the hero of World War I as "not only a great soldier, but a faithful churchman and friend of the cathedral." He expressed the hope that a memorial to General Pershing would be erected at the cathedral.

MSC Officer to Naval War College—The assignment of Maj. Clarence E. McKeown, MSC, commander of troops at the Army Medical Center, Washington, D. C., to the Naval War College is believed to mark the first time that a Medical Department officer has been assigned to this Service school.

Flight Pay Data—Rep. Frank W. Boykin (D. Ala.), observing that the death rate of military-flier personnel from 1945 to 1947 was approximately 10.05 per 1,000, has appealed for Congressional approval to the new pay legislation. He inserted into the "Congressional Record" data concerning mortality rates of Air Force and Navy flyers and said that as a result of a 12-year shorter life expectancy, the "average flying officer will receive $64,744 less lifetime pay than will a nonflying officer in any of the several air arms of the different Services." The Alabama legislator said also that one insurance company which previously provided coverage to all military flying personnel at a premium of 60 cents per $100 of insurance, payable for a period of 10 years, now has made the extra payment applicable to the entire life of the policy. This, said Representative Boykin, means that a man who carried a $10,000 policy would, upon receiving flight status, be required to pay $6 per month extra. Assuming that this officer continued flying service for 20 years, Representative Boykin explained, this would mean an approximate increased premium cost of $1,440.

Provost Marshal General—A new division in the Office of the Provost Marshal General has been established by direction of Col. Francis E. Howard, Acting The Provost Marshal General, following issue of Staff Administration Circular No. 5-9-4, Office Chief of Staff, which transferred certain functions of Civil Affairs to the Provost Marshal General's Office. The new division will have similar status to present divisions of the PMGO which include the Military Police Division, Provost Division, Prisoner of War Division, and Executive Divsion. Supervision of training of Military Government units, staffs and individuals in the Organized Reserve, and the expansion or development of facilities that might be needed in event of mobilization will in the future be a responsibility of The Provost Marshal General. No changes are anticipated in composition or designation of existing Military Government units at the present time but consideration is being given to possible expansion of the Military Police School to provide resident and extension courses in Military Government. During the period 1942-1946 the selection and training of Military Government personnel was similarly a function of the Provost Marshal General's Office.

Lt. Colonel Earl L. Edwards, Chief, Provost Division, Provost Marshal General's Office, has joined Maj. Gen. E. P. Parker at Geneva, Switzerland, to assist the Army's representative to the Diplomatic Conference for Protection of War Victims now in progress. The conference is formulating new international agreements for the treatment of wounded, sick, merchant mariners, prisoners of war and enemy civilians in time of war. Colonel Edwards was actively engaged in enforcement of the previous conventions during World War II when he was serving with the Prisoner of War Division of the Provost Marshal General's Office.

National Guard—The largest peacetime National Guard in history will hold the greatest field encampment in National Guard history, from 4 June to 24 Sept., when an estimated 283,500 Guardsmen in some 4,500 Army units will move to camps throughout the Nation for two weeks of intensive field maneuvers. Many reserve officers also will train with Guard units. About 40,000 members of the Air Guard will also take part in field training this year.

The 126th Infantry, Michigan National Guard, Grand Rapids, has established a record by signing up three Medal of Honor recipients on its regimental roster. In a ceremony at the Grand Rapids armory 24 May Pfc. Dirk J. Vlug and Pharmacist Mate 1st Class Francis J. Pierce took their oaths as members of the Michigan National Guard. Both veterans won the nation's highest award for valor in the Pacific area during the recent war. Only last month the regiment's third medal of honor winner, Lt. John C. Sjogren, also became a member of the Michigan National Guard. Vlug is being appointed a master sergeant in the same regiment with which he won his Congressional Medal 15 Dec. 1944 on Leyte. Pierce is being appointed a second lieutenant to serve as liaison officer.

Doucette, as commander of the 1307th Ordnance Training Procurement District, Organized Reserve Corps, with headquarters in New York City. Headquarters, U. S. Army, Pacific, has announced that effective 10 June Col. Kendall J. Fielder will relieve Col. George Honnen as the USARPAC Executive for Civilian Components, responsible for supervision of the training, supply and administration of the National Guard, Organized Reserve Corps and Reserve Officers Training Corps.

Finance Department Conference—The third annual conference of the Army Finance Department was conducted 16 to 20 May, at the Army Finance Center, St. Louis, Mo., with Maj. Gen. Eugene M. Foster, Chief of Finance, presiding and Brig. Gen. Emmett J. Bean, Commanding General of the Center and Commandant of the Army Finance School, as host. The key-note of the conference was sounded by General Foster in his message of welcome to the conferees in which he pointed out that the time honored concept of the Finance Department mission is being broadened daily to include many challenging new problems and duties particularly in the field of management and including the development and application of management tools and principles. Maj. Gen. Edmond H. Leavey, The Army Comptroller, expanded on the management theme and pointed to the conference as a clear illustration of the rapid development and increasing importance of business and financial management throughout the Army.

In addition to Maj. General Leavey and key Finance Department personnel of the Office of the Chief of Finance, Army Finance Center, Army Audit Agency, Finance officers, U. S. Army, and of ZI and oversea major commands, the following distinguished guests attended the conference: Mr. Robert E. Lambert, Exec. Secretary, House Appropriations Committee, Washington, D. Brown, GSC, and Mr. C. H. Martini, Office of the Army Comptroller, Washington, D. C.; and Col. William P. Campbell, GSC, Chief, Army Audit Agency, Washington, D. C.

Navy Nurse Corps—A Conference of Chief Nurses from continental naval hospitals was recently held by the Director of the Navy Nurse Corps, Capt. Nellie J. DeWitt, NC, at the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery. Among the subjects discussed were the nursing problems and changes that have taken place in the nursing world and in the Navy during the post-war years. The procurement of nurses and the importance and need for a stronger Reserve Nurse Corps were stressed.

Bureau of Medicine and Surgery—Rear Adm. Lamont Pugh, MC, USN, Deputy and Assistant Chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, and Rear Adm. Carlton L. Andrus, MC, USN, District Medical Officer, Third Naval District, joined Rear Adm. Joel T. Boone, MC, USN, General Inspector Medical Department, Capt. C. R. Ball, MC, Director of the Physical Qualifications and Medical Records, Division of BuMed and Mr. E. G. Purdy, Administrative Officer of that Division in a recent inspection of the field Medical Records Branch, BuMed, located at the Naval Records Management Center, Garden City, Long Island, N. Y.

Naval Dental Corps—The 91 senior dental students who are Ensigns, HP, USNR, were nominated this week for assignment to active duty as Lieutenants (jg) in the Dental Corps of the Navy. These dental students are obligated to accept appointments and remain on active duty as dental officers for a minimum period of two years following their graduation. Thirty-five of these officers have been selected for training in the Navy's Dental Interneship Program and 56 will receive duty assignments in the dental departments of naval activities within the United States.

The board which convened to select candidates for the Naval Dental Intern Training Program commencing 22 Aug., 1949, announced its findings last week. The number of applications for this training exceeded the 40 vacancies which were available. Twenty of the dental interns will be assigned to naval teaching hospitals and 20 to the Naval Dental School, National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md. for the first six months. The interns at the hospitals will exchange assignments with those at the Naval Dental School for the second six months training period.

Argentine Medal Decision—Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, AUS, military aide to the President and 86 other Army officers will be barred for the present from wearing medals awarded by Argentina and 19 other foreign nations. A subcommittee of the House Armed Services subcommittee refused to act on legislation which would authorize the wearing of the medals, which will continue to be held in custody by the State Department.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), rebuked the Army for sending to Congress a bill concerning the medals, "in these busy times of bad deal legislation, New Deal legislation and mandate legislation. If those people down at the Army Department don't have anything more to do than this," he said, "maybe we had better send all of them out with troops again." The award to General Vaughan of the medal from Argentina has been attacked vigorously by Mr. Drew Pearson, newspaper columnist, whose charges prompted President Truman to defend publicly the record of his military aide. In addition to General Vaughan, 15 other Army officers were awarded the decoration, the Order of the Liberator, General San Martin.

Army Nurse Corps—Captain Katherin S. Gillies, ANC, has arrived at the Army Medical Center, Washington, D. C., on assignment as surgical nurse in Walter Reed General Hospital. Graduated from Chester High School, Penna., in 1933, Captain Gillies was engaged in private duty nursing prior to entering the Army Nurse Corps. Her first assignment was as surgical nurse at Camp Lee, Va. From there Captain Gillies served a tour of duty in the 110th Station Hospital, Vienna, Austria.

Women's Medical Specialist Corps—The second phase of the recently inaugurated physical therapy training program commenced this week at Walter Reed General Hospital with the arrival of five newly-commissioned second lieutenants. These officers, attached to the Women's Medical Specialist Corps, will undergo a six months training period at this installation, most of which time will be spent in practical application of training received during the first phase of the program. Now assigned to the physical therapy training program after six months at Fort Sam Houston, Texas are: 2d Lieutenants Martha J. Eason, Modenna M. Brossard, Mary N. Will, Carolyn I. Regan, and Catherine M. Owen.

Fifty years ago the club was a small rooming house at 38 I St., N.W., with accommodations for nine men. Today there are beds for 147, and more than 2,000 men eat and sleep here each month. This is truly a record of unselfish achievement, and tribute should be paid to the far-sighted women of 1899 who founded the club, and to the patriotic, hard-working women of today who are celebrating 50 years of service to the service men.

Unification Bill Passes Senate

The Senate this week passed legislation to strengthen the National Security Act, particularly by increasing the authority of the Secretary of Defense.

The bill was passed as presented by the Senate Armed Services Committee with but one exception. Approved was an amendment which would permit the transfer from one service to another of permanent officers, provided that four conditions are met: the President must approve the transfer; the officer must be willing; the Service to which he is now assigned must agree to let him go; and the Service to which he is transferred must agree to accept him.

Army General Officers' List

The subcommittee of the Senate Armed Services Committee, organized to investigate the delay in the release of the Army general officer eligibility list, has not met and, according to Senator Tydings, (D-Md.) "may never meet."

Senator Tydings, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, has said that there is no reason for the subcommittee to meet. He explained that the President has the right to withhold the list to make certain that provisions of law have been met. Whether members of the subcommittee might press for further study of the delayed list was not certain late this week.

PX Study Continues

A subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee surveying operations of post exchanges and ships service stores was told this week that the commissaries receive an annual subsidy of $4,800,000 a year. A committee investigator said that in addition to this support of salaries of workers, the Government provides free light, heat and other services.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee suggested that the commissaries could wipe out the $4,800,000 deficit by raising prices six or seven per cent.

Obituary

The Hon. James V. Forrestal

The Hon. James V. Forrestal, 57, a lieutenant and Navy flier during World War I, successor to the late Col. Frank Knox as Secretary of the Navy, and the nation's first Secretary of Defense, was buried with military rites 25 May in Arlington National Cemetery, Va.

Praised by President Truman as an "able and devoted public servant" who was "as truly a casualty of the war as if he had died on a firing line," Mr. Forrestal took his own life Sunday, 22 May, in a leap from a tower window at the Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Md.

He is survived by his widow and two sons, Michael and Peter.

He had been under treatment at the hospital for "occupational fatigue," declared a result of his exhausting labors to insure the safety of the country he had served so faithfully.

Top civilian and military officials of the Nation were sorrowed by the tragic death of a distinguished citizen who, as President Truman said, had sacrificed his life to guard the United States against peril.

As Mr. Forrestal was laid to rest at Arlington in a grave close by that of General Malin Craig, former Army Chief of Staff, a Navy board of inquiry, headed by Capt. A. A. Marsteller, MC, USN, appointed by Rear Adm. Morton D. Willcutts, MC, USN, commander of the National Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, was investigating the circumstances of Mr. Forrestal's illness and of his leap from the window of a diet kitchen on the 16th floor. Other members of the board are: Capt. Vince Hernandez, Comdr. William W. Ayers and Lt. Comdr. James J. Whatton, all of MC, USN. Lt. Robert F. Hooper, MSC, USN, is recorder. Among the more important witnesses testifying before the board was Capt. George N. Raines, MC, USN, noted Navy psychiatrist who was attending Mr. Forrestal.

To retiring Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan, Mrs. Forrestal wrote that "Jim would be hurt indeed if he felt there was any criticism of the Naval Medical Center for its care of him, particularly as there is no foundation for criticism. My sons and I are grateful to the Commander and the staff of the Naval Medical Center, and particularly to Dr. Raines, for the devoted care which they gave Jim. It would have been impossible for him to have recovered with the knowledge that he was under constant watch, and I am sure that the risk in gradually dispensing with the watch was essential."

"Jim Forrestal loved the Navy," his widow added. "We feel that the Navy returned his affection in full measure, and that this was never reflected more clearly than in the care he received from Navy hands at Bethesda. We shall always be grateful."

That the affection for Mr. Forrestal transcended the Navy and reached beyond the Armed Forces was attested at the funeral rites at Arlington. Invited as honorary pallbearers were the following notables:

Hon. Herbert Hoover, former President of the United States.

Hon. Fred M. Vinson, Chief Justice of the United States.

General of the Army George C. Marshall, former Secretary of State and former Chief of Staff, U. S. Army.

Hon. James F. Byrnes, former Secretary of State.

Hon. John J. McCloy, former Assistant Secretary of War.

Hon. Kenneth C. Royall, former Secretary of the Army.

Hon. Robert P. Patterson, former Secretary of War.

Hon. John L. Sullivan, retiring Secretary of the Navy.

Hon. Robert A. Lovett, former Under Secretary of State and former Assistant Secretary of War.

Hon. Artemus L. Gates, former Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air.

Hon. Cornelius V. Whitney, Under Secretary of Commerce and former Assistant Secretary of the Air Force.

Hon. James A. Farley, former Postmaster General.

General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, President of Columbia University and presiding officer of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, USN-Ret., former Chief of Staff to the Commander-in-Chief.

Hon. Bernard Baruch of New York, N. Y.

Hon. Clarence Dillon, of Dillon, Read & Co., New York, N. Y.

Hon. Nicholas S. Ludington of Markeim, Chalmers and Ludington, Philadelphia, Pa.

Hon. Thomas G. Corcoran of Washington, D. C.

Hon. Edward L. Shea of the Ethyl Corporation, New York, N. Y.

Hon. Ferdinand Eberstadt of New York, N. Y.

Hon. Dean Mathey, Empire Trust Co., New York, N. Y.

Hon. Paul V. Shields, Shields and Company, New York, N. Y.

The active body bearers were two enlisted men each from the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force:

Army—Pfc. Billy J. Gainer and Pvt. James R. Schweikert; Navy—Francis K. Rae, Quartermaster, Third Class, and Richard L. Pate, Seaman; Marine Corps—M. Sgt. Elmer Hansen and T. Sgt. Edward Brooks; Air Force—S. Sgt. Virgil J. Roti and Sgt. Richard A. McCaffrey. The Marine Corps buglers who sounded taps were: Taps at grave, Principal Musician Edward Masters; Echo taps, First Class Musician Robert DeHart.

The body arrived at the Arlington National Cemetery Gate at 10:50 A.M. Rear Adm. John E. Gingrich, USN, escorted the body from the hospital to the cemetery gate. The casket, covered with a blanket of flowers presented by the Cabinet, was placed on a horsedrawn caisson and taken to the Amphitheater.

A saluting battery of artillerymen from the 3rd Infantry Regiment at Fort Myer, Va., fired a 19-gun (75 mm howitzer) salute from the entrance of the caisson to the cemetery.

The U. S. Naval Academy Band escorted the caisson up to the Amphitheater and remained with the body at the Amphitheater. The Army Band played at the Amphitheater. The Marine Band played at the grave and sounded taps. Eight Marines fired the final salute of three volleys.

The funeral procession was led by Rear Adm. John W. Roper, USN, Naval Bureau of Personnel, Escort Commander. Following in order were the Navy Band, one company of midshipmen, a second company of midshipmen, the National and Naval Academy colors, a third company of midshipmen, a fourth company of midshipmen, a composite battalion: one company of Army, one company of Marines; colors, one company of Navy, one company of Air Force, and horsedrawn caisson flanked by the eight, active bodybearers.

The Episcopal Prayer Service was read by the Right Rev. Wallace E. Conkling, Bishop of the Episcopal Church Diocese of Chicago, at the funeral rites in Arlington Memorial Amphitheater.

Bishop Conkling, a close friend of the Forrestal family, selected the 46th Psalm, "A Song Upon Alamoth," and the 130th Psalm, "A Song of Degrees." He then read the lesson from a New Testament scripture, First Corinthians, 15th Chapter, Verses 20 to 58, "The Order of the Resurrection."

At the close of the services, Rear Adm. William N. Thomas, USN, Navy Chief of Chaplains, requested those in attendance to remain in the Amphitheater until the funeral cortege and the President of the United States left.

At the gravesite ceremonies, which were private, Bishop Conkling read the Episcopal committal service, with prayers.

The musical program for the funeral included two of Mr. Forrestal's favorite selections, Handel's Largo and Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Hymn to the Sun." They were played, at the request of his family, by the Marine Band at the gravesite ceremonies.

Financial Digest

Financial circles were gratified this week to learn that very little legislation generally regarded as adverse to business is likely to be enacted at the present session of Congress.

Senate Leader Scott Lucas (D-Ill.), after conferring with the President, indicated that Congress would probably adjourn on 31 July, and that the only measures of prime importance to be insisted upon at the present session were the ratification of the Atlantic Pact, the repeal of the Taft-Hartley Labor Act, and the extension of the Reciprocal Trade Act.

Apparently consideration of a number of measures, bearing directly on the national economy, which were originally on the current Truman legislative program, will be deferred until the next session convenes in January. Among these are the proposed $4 billion increase in Federal taxes, the expansion of Social Security, including compulsory health insurance, and the increase in minimum wages.

The enactment of anti-inflation measures, recommended by the President several months ago, is apparently no longer necessary. The change in the business picture this Spring indicates that consideration may be given to ways to check deflation, rather than to means for curbing inflation.

Merchant Marine

The following report on the merchant marine of the Soviet Union was prepared by the American Merchant Marine Institute. It describes, in brief, the development of the Russian merchant fleet since the end of World War I.

"Since shortly after the end of the first World War the U.S.S.R. has been building up a merchant fleet, and in accordance with the political doctrine of the country this is entirely State-owned. At first the fleet consisted of only a few ships most of which were obsolete, but during the slump period between the wars the opportunity was taken to acquire better vessels whose owners had been compelled to lay them up. In spite of this, by the time the second World War broke out the national fleet still handled only a small part of the country's foreign trade, or engaged in coastwise traffic. Since the last war it has been difficult to trace the uses to which these vessels are being put, since they have the habit of vanishing for months on end between calls at foreign ports, reports 'The Syren and Shipping.'

"After the war the Soviet Union gained possession of a number of former German liners built especially for deep-sea trades, and it is almost certain that these are being used uneconomically if they are engaged solely in coasting work between Russian Black Sea ports or Baltic ports. It should have followed from the post-war acquisitions that Russia would engage in regular services, but after four years she is still far from being a competitor on the regular routes. Observation of the ships passing the Bosphorus or Kiel and noting their ports of call until they vanish behind the iron curtain again, sheds some light on the way the fleet is being used.

Cadets and Midshipmen to AF

The President has nominated 229 cadets from the U. S. Military Academy at West Point and 55 midshipmen from the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis to receive Regular U. S. Air Force commissions as second lieutenants.

The names of cadets and midshipmen nominated were submitted by the Army and Navy in accordance with a directive of the Secretary of Defense, last 9 Nov. which authorized 40 percent of the 1949 graduating class of the Military Academy and seven percent of the Naval Academy class to be commissioned by the Air Force.

Until such time as the Air Force may have its own service academy, a portion of each graduating class of West Point and Annapolis will be commissioned in the Air Force. Both academies will graduate their 1949 classes 3 June.

Of the number to be commissioned by the Air Force, 148 West Point cadets and 36 Annapolis midshipmen will undergo flight training; and will be enrolled in the aviation cadet class beginning in August. The remaining 81 cadets and 19 midshipmen will be assigned throughout the Air Force.
